A Twist of Faith was my first novel by Pepper Basham, but it won't be my last. These characters are endearing, easing their way into my heart with their genuine hospitality and care for each other. I appreciated the realistic way their accents and manner of speaking are portrayed throughout the story.

A Twist of Faith is a treasure, and I will read this story again and again. The sheer beauty of the author’s prose stalled my reading at times to ponder the word pictures. Rather than taking me out of the story, they deepened my appreciation. For example, Reese’s silent observation that Dee “wore lonely like a raincoat.” Makes you think, doesn’t it? I fell deeply in love with the ...

~~A Simple Twist of Fate (1994) - IMDb~~

Twist of (Bad) Faith This book deliberately tricks the reader, which is standard fare for a mystery/thriller, but this one does so in a way which is paramount to betrayal. The author switches points of view between chapters, most of the time using third person limited. However, in the Ava (the protagonist according to the book blurb) chapters, the POV is first person. From her point of view ...

~~Twist of Faith by Ellen J. Green - Goodreads~~

Faith may be induced or created by repeatedly giving instructions to our subconscious mind through the principle of autosuggestion - repetition of affirmation of orders to your subconscious mind. Behind every successful idea is an unwavering faith in the ability of that idea to succeed.
