provocative scholarly work but ultimately underwhelming. The author says, "Cyber war will not take place," and you are reassured and hopeful that this means current cyber issues like Russia's infiltration of the elections and social media are not realistic to happen.

Cyber War Will Not Take Place by Thomas Rid

This article argues in three steps that cyber war has never happened in the past, that cyber war does not take place in the present, and that it is unlikely that cyber war will occur in the future. It first outlines what would constitute cyber war: a potentially lethal, instrumental, and political act of force conducted through malicious code.

Cyber War Will Not Take Place | Thomas Rid

Cyber war does not take place in the present. And it is highly unlikely that cyber war will occur in the future. Instead, all past and present political cyber attacks are merely sophisticated versions of three activities that are as old as warfare itself: subversion, espionage, and sabotage. That is improbable to change in the years ahead."

Thomas Rid, Cyber War Will Not Take Place (London, Hurst, 2017), pp. 232, ISBN 9781849047128 Reviewed by Myriam Dunn Cavelty Center for Security Studies, ETH Zürich It is a clear signal of how cybersecurity is still unusual as a field of research when a book first published in 2013 receives the label "conflict classic" in 2017. Yet, Thomas

Thomas Rid, Cyber War Will Not Take Place

Cyber War Will Not Take Place cuts through the hype and takes a fresh look at cyber security. Thomas Rid argues that the focus on war and winning distracts from the real challenge of cyberspace: non-violent confrontation that may rival or even replace violence in surprising ways.

Thomas Rid, the author of Cyber War Will Not Take Place, would have wholeheartedly agreed with this assessment, arguing, as he does in the book, that “ all known political cyber offenses are neither common crime nor common war ” (p. 10). However, Rid would have been highly critical of the implicit message that we are witnessing the advent of the “ much-vaunted war in the ostensible fifth domain ” of cyberspace.

Dr. Rid asserts that Cyber is non-lethal, therefore Cyber war will not take place. His assertion can be discredited with three letters: UAV. Here we have a flying computer with weapons that is flown through the Internet. I would say that UAVs are most certainly lethal and they are flown from thousands of miles away through Cyberspace.

In summary, Rid ' s arguments are that: cyber-attacks will always lack war ' s capacity for direct violence; they operate in the domains of subversion, espionage and sabotage; and they have limited political or symbolic utility – compared with other means available to states and non-state actors. This does not mean they are unimportant.
