Kaffir Boy Introduction. Kaffir Boy is Mark Mathabane's autobiographical story of his escape from life in apartheid South Africa through education and sports. Apartheid was a political system enacted by the white-minority-led government in South Africa in 1948 and lasted until 1994. Although black South Africans had endured racial oppression for almost three hundred years at the start of apartheid, this political system was an especially virulent form of racial oppression.
