My point with my personal story is this, after it was all said and done, my husband and I both agreed that it would have been great to have a moment (first look) with just us two, and could joke or say what's really in our hearts, without the pressure of everyone staring at us.

What Is The First Look? - Kilbuck

In first person point of view, the story is told from the narrator's perspective. This allows the narrator to give readers their first-hand experience, including what they saw, felt, thought, heard, said, and did. Think of it kind of like The Blair Witch Project: in first person point of view, it's like the narrator is wearing a GoPro camera strapped to their forehead. The reader sees exactly what the narrator sees and gets their singular perspective on the events that unfold.

Planning your outfit in advance is a great first step to always look on point. Here are some quick tips on how to do it: Write It Down
As I wrote, I like to write it down. As I'm, more or less, fully aware of the clothes in my wardrobe I just write down some words like "stripes, high jeans, red lips, faux fur, elegant".
