Autumn 2015 Book Haul Nova Samuel R Delany N?va (1968) is a science fiction novel by American writer Samuel R. Delany. Nominally space opera, it explores the politics and culture of a future where cyborg technology is universal (the novel is one of the Page 4/16 precursors to cyberpunk), yet making major decisions can involve using tarot cards.

Nova is Samuel "Chip" Delany's 1968 space opera with mythic/Grail Quest overtones. It is packed with different themes, subtexts, allegorical and cultural references, and literary experiments, and the young author (just 25 years old) is clearly a very talented, intelligent, and passionate writer. But I didn't enjoy it, sadly.

Nova, Samuel R. Delany's Hugo-nominated novel from 1968, showcases most of this author's familiar eccentricities.

Nova by Samuel R. Delany - Conceptual Fiction
In the grandest manner of speculative fiction, Nova is a wise and witty classic that casts a fascinating new light on some of humanity's oldest truths and enduring myths.

Nova is probably Delany's most mainstream work, meaning that he cranked the intellect and dialect dial down just a tad so us mortals can just enjoy a fun book for once. And Nova delivers. The story centers around a the haunted captain of the Roc (a ship) that is on a quest for the equivalent of his Holy Grail.

"Samuel R. Delany is one of the finest living American writers. In this revealing autobiographical love story, told in collaboration with fine-artist Mia Wolff, Delany's brilliance shines. It's filthy and earthy and beautiful, like an orchid in a gutter, it tells you more than you wanted to know, and makes you glad it did."
