Philosophy Ethics And Buddhism Heles School Plymouth

Buddhism is a spiritual tradition founded in India around 500 BCE by Prince Siddhartha Gautama, later to become Gautama Buddha ('Buddha' meaning "awakened one" in Sanskrit). Most Buddhist traditions (the main two being Theravada and Mahayana) share a common ethical code for lay followers, while monastic codes tend to vary by region and tradition. The common ethical principles of Buddhism were articulated by Gautama Buddha.
