A Walk Through Ghent. By Rick Steves. The Ghent Altarpiece may be the most influential painting in European art history — and perhaps the most stolen masterpiece in existence. (photo: Cameron Hewitt) Ghent was founded at the confluence of two rivers: the Lys and the Scheldt. (photo: Rick Steves) Once one of Belgium's medieval powerhouses, Ghent — about 30 minutes away from both Brussels and Bruges — has not been preserved in amber.

Also, within the city taxis are quite cheap. And, in fairness to Plymouth, it was hugely damaged during the war (apparently every public building was destroyed by the Germans), and in the rebuilding it suffered from the planners 1950/60s obsession with building concrete monstrosities and running wide roads through the city centre.
