I had just settled into the atmosphere, the mix of Arawa dialect and English, the hustle and bustle of Tahuri's family, the steam from the thermals. There is a lot of pain and violence in these stories (unsurprisingly, given that something like 2 out of 3 Maori girls experience sexual violence by the age of 16).

Harakeke was the name given to this plant by Maori although the first European traders called it flax. Though we still call it flax today, Harakeke is really a lily. It is unique to New Zealand and is our oldest plant species. This is our honeymoon suite which looks out towards the Tasman Sea and Kapiti Island.
