We read the book, followed the goals and used "thumb gloves" (just cut the fingers out of soft winter gloves and sew around them to keep from fraying - this leaves only the thumb with a glove). We had several thumb gloves so we could wash them. The thumb gloves allowed my daughter to stop sucking her thumb for good.

Stops the Oral Fixation. NIPIT was designed to stop thumb sucking and finger sucking, but it really stops the oral fixation altogether. By contrast, thumb guards and finger guards are worn on the hand and kids often transfer the habit from sucking the thumb to sucking a finger, or to chewing on the thumb guard. The key to breaking the habit is first understanding that it is an ¶oral fixation,¶ not just a desire to suck on the thumb or fingers.

The difference between your thumb and the other fingers on your hand is the number of joints and phalanges, or bones. The thumb only has one joint and two phalanges, as opposed to the two joints and three phalanges your other fingers have in common. But that doesn't mean the thumb isn't a finger. Think of your big toe.
