Hi Paul, just reading your feeds. The vectra's are also known for their crankshaft sensors which are located on the bottom left side of the engine behind the manifold heat shield. This causes a lumpy tickover and loss of power also. ps, if your plug leads are sitting in a pool of oil as suggested before, don't buy a cheap rocker cover gasket, it's false economy.

Vectra 1.8 - Vectra 1.8 rough idle & temperature gauge cold. Hi, I have bought a Vauxhall Vectra 1.8 (2000) with a x18xe1 engine. Much of the time idling is very rough and occasionally the car stalls when idle. Lights will dim and RPM will jump around between 300 and 1200. Engine management light is on. Strong petrol smell when idle inside the car.

Vauxhall Vectra C - hesitation and rough running. hi im looking some advice! i own a 06 Vauxhall Vectra 3.0 v6 diesel (62000 miles). Over the past week i've noticed when accelerating (esp on inclines) the whole car will vibrate badly, seems worse when cold although no real loss of power is evident. Recently though even when stationary and at idle the revs will drop and rise and the engine will ...

I have ensured that there is no petrol fuel pressure to eliminate a leaking fuel injector. I have also re-checked the memory and code 43 is flashing (according to your past information this means the Divider not working?) but the car runs fine when the idle is increased to approximately 1100 rpm and during normal driving?
